

The John M. Gunn International Scholarship for Visiting Students

Application deadline March 7 • Announcements made by March 31

About the John M. Gunn International Scholarship

Washington and Lee University welcomes applicants for the John M. Gunn International Scholarship for Visiting Students. Through the Gunn Scholarship, eligible students are invited to spend one year at W&L to augment the major studies in which they are engaged at their home institutions. The scholarship pays the full tuition, room, board, and transportation costs for one year. Gunn scholars may come from any academic discipline, but preference is given to students who 1) will focus some of their work in our Williams School, which houses the departments of Accounting, Business Administration, Economics, and Politics (including American Politics, Global Politics, and Political Theory) and 2) are interested in a broader education in the liberal arts. Gunn Scholars may take up to FOUR courses in the Williams School. The scholarship requires students to experience the American liberal model of education by taking courses in the College of Arts and Sciences and/or in our many interdisciplinary programs such as "Law, Justice and Society" and "Poverty and Human Capability." Once the is selected, he or she will be assigned an academic adviser in the Williams School who will work with the scholar to select classes for the fall term. While at W&L, students have access to a world of academic, athletic and extracurricular activities and the opportunity to explore unique on-campus housing options such as the Global Service House.
